THERAPY NEVER INCLUDES SEXUAL BEHAVIOR
Therapy Never Includes Sexual Behavior

California’s lawmakers and licensing boards want the public to know that professional therapy never includes sexual contact between a therapist and a client. It also never includes inappropriate sexual suggestions, or any other kind of sexual behavior between a therapist and a client. Sexual contact of any kind between a therapist and a client is unethical and illegal in the State of California. Additionally, with regard to former clients, sexual contact within two years after termination of therapy is also illegal and unethical. It is always the responsibility of the therapist to ensure that sexual contact with a client, whether consensual or not, does not occur.

INTRODUCTION

Sexual behavior between a therapist and a client can harm the client. Harm may arise from the therapist’s exploitation of the client to fulfill his or her own needs or desires, and from the therapist’s loss of the objectivity necessary for effective therapy. All therapists are trained and educated to know that this kind of behavior is illegal and unethical.

Therapists are trusted and respected by their clients, and it is not uncommon for clients to admire and feel attracted to them. However, a therapist who accepts or encourages the expression of these feelings through sexual behavior with the client—or tells a client that sexual involvement is part of therapy—violates the therapeutic relationship, and engages in conduct that may be illegal and unethical. This kind of abusive behavior can cause harmful, long-lasting, emotional, and psychological effects to the client.

CLIENT RIGHTS

You, as a client, have the right to:

• Request and receive information about the therapist’s professional capabilities, including licensure, education, training, experience, professional association membership, specialization, and limitations.

• Be treated with dignity and respect.

• A safe environment, free from sexual, physical, and emotional abuse.

• Ask questions about your therapy or other services from your provider.

• Decline to answer any question or disclose any information you choose not to reveal.

• Request and receive information from the therapist about your progress toward your treatment goals.

• Know the limits of confidentiality and the circumstances in which a therapist is legally required to disclose information to others.

• Know if there are supervisors, consultants, students, or others with whom your therapist will discuss your case.

• Decline a particular type of treatment, or end treatment without obligation or harassment.

• Refuse electronic recording.

• Request and (in most cases) receive a summary of your records, including the diagnosis, your progress, and the type of treatment.

• Report unethical and illegal behavior by a therapist (see “What You Can Do”).

• Receive a second opinion at any time about your therapy or your therapist’s methods.

• Receive a copy of your records or have a copy of your records transferred to any therapist or agency you choose.
WARNING SIGNS

In most sexual misconduct cases, other inappropriate behavior comes first. While it may be subtle or confusing, it usually feels uncomfortable to the client. Some clues or warning signs are:

- Telling sexual jokes or stories.
- Sending obscene images or messages to the client.
- Unwanted physical contact.
- Excessive out-of-session communication (e.g., text, phone, email, social media, etc.) not related to therapy.
- Inviting a client to lunch, dinner, or other social and professional activities.
- Dating.
- Changing the office’s business practices (e.g., scheduling late appointments when no one is around, having sessions away from the office, etc.).
- Confiding in a client (e.g., about the therapist’s love life, work problems, loneliness, marital problems, etc.).
- Telling a client that he or she is special, or that the therapist loves him or her.
- Relying on a client for personal and emotional support.
- Giving or receiving significant gifts.
- Suggesting or supporting the client’s isolation from social support systems, increasing dependency on the therapist.
- Providing or using alcohol or drugs during sessions.

If you are experiencing any of these warning signs, you have the right to file a complaint with the appropriate licensing board and consult with another therapist.
COMMON REACTIONS TO SEXUAL MISCONDUCT BY A THERAPIST

If a therapist has engaged in any sexual behavior or contact with you, you may experience some or all of the following feelings or reactions:

• Intimidated or threatened.
• Guilt and responsibility—even though it is the therapist’s responsibility to keep sexual behavior out of therapy.
• Mixed feelings about the therapist—e.g., protectiveness, anger, love, betrayal.
• Isolation and emptiness.
• Distrust of others’ feelings or intentions, or your own feelings.
• Fearful that no one will believe you.
• Feeling victimized or violated.
• Experiencing traumatic symptoms, e.g., anxiety, nightmares, obsessive thoughts, depression, or suicidal or homicidal thoughts.
WHAT YOU CAN DO

Report the Therapist—What happened to you may be illegal and unethical and you should report it to the appropriate licensing board as soon as possible in order for the board to take appropriate action within the statute of limitations.

In California, there are four boards that license and regulate therapists.

Board of Behavioral Sciences

The purpose of these licensing boards is to protect the health, safety, and welfare of consumers. Licensing boards have the authority to discipline therapists by using the administrative law process.
How to File a Complaint

You can submit your complaint online or in writing using the forms on the respective board’s website to start the process. You should provide as much information as possible, but it is especially helpful to provide the following information, if available:

• Detailed description of the conduct you are reporting.
• Copies of materials that support your complaint, e.g., emails, text messages, correspondence between you and the therapist, photographs or other images you shared with or received from the therapist, etc.

The board will require a signed release form, authorizing it to obtain your records from the therapist. These records are required for official use, including investigation and possible administrative proceedings regarding any violations of the law. Your complaint will be evaluated, investigated, and you will be notified of the outcome.

The following are possible outcomes of your complaint:

• Revocation or surrender of the therapist’s license: This results in the loss of license and right to practice.
• Probation: The therapist’s license may be placed on probation for a defined period of time, with terms and conditions that must be complied with, in order to continue to practice.
• Case is closed and no action taken against the therapist’s license: The board could not substantiate a violation of the laws and regulations.

It is board policy to use only initials, rather than full names, to identify clients in public disciplinary documents. However, hearings are open to the public, and you may be asked to testify. All disciplinary actions are public information.

In addition to filing a complaint with the appropriate regulatory board, you may also have civil remedies and criminal recourse available to you in regard to this incident.
WHERE TO GET HELP

Therapy may be an important tool in your recovery. Before selecting a new therapist, here are a few suggestions to support that process:

- Ask someone you know and trust for a referral.
- Search online for a local sexual assault center or crisis intervention service. These centers can refer you to therapists experienced in dealing with those who have suffered sexual misconduct by a therapist.
- Contact professional associations and ask for referrals to therapists who specialize in helping those who have suffered sexual misconduct by a therapist.
- Seek a referral from your primary care physician or insurance provider.

Visit the board’s website to verify the status of the therapist’s license.
FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Is it normal to feel attracted to a therapist?
Yes, it is normal to feel attracted to someone who is attentive, kind, and caring. This is a common reaction toward someone who is helping you. However, all therapists are trained to be aware of this and to maintain a professional therapy relationship that is beneficial to the client.

What if the client initiated sexual behavior?
The therapist is the one who is responsible for ensuring that sexual behavior or contact is not part of therapy.

Why do I feel scared or confused about reporting my therapist?
In most cases, the therapist is an important person in the client’s life. Therefore, feelings such as fear, confusion, protectiveness, shame, or guilt are common.

Can I file a complaint if there is or has been a civil case between myself and the therapist?
Yes, you may file a complaint at any time, whether the case is ongoing or concluded. A civil settlement cannot preclude you from filing a complaint against a licensee.

No, filing a complaint is free and can be filed via telephone, email, mail, or online.

Can I file a complaint if I had a personal relationship with my therapist?
